Complete Destruction Of Canada's Spruce Timber Threatened By Insect Pest

Complete destruction within a quarter century of Canada's spruce timber supply is threatened by a devastating outbreak of the spruce sawfly, says a Canadian forest expert. The pest, which was first reported in 1950, is now spreading rapidly and is estimated to be at least 10,000,000,000 in its efforts.

The European spruce sawfly, introduced accidentally to this country and first noted in 1950, is known to have spread from the west coast to Nova Scotia and west at least as far as Temiskaming, Ontario, leaving 6,000 square miles of dead timber in its path.

Between Gaspé and Temiskaming lies a vast area of forest in which the foliage-eating fly may have established itself without being observed. Governments and private agencies are spending $1,600,000 a year in the area looking for its presence.

The sawfly, in appearance about the size of a housefly, lays eggs in the needles of spruce trees. The eggs hatch, and small green caterpillars eat the needles and cause the caterpillars to migrate and defoliate the trees.

"The caterpillars can be eaten by a shrew or mouse, but not enough of them to do any harm," says the expert. "Under favorable circumstances the insects multiply with great rapidity."

The department of agriculture is striving to introduce effective parasites to attack the caterpillars. It is working in the laboratory at Belleville, Ontario, seeking to develop parasites in the forest where they will prey on the caterpillars and cypreses.

Although it is estimated that a somewhat similar insect, destroyed some 20 years, beginning in 1880, Parasites introduced to check their numbers were unable to breed them at the time, but as the larva was destroyed the final effect of the parasites was to destroy them numerically, eventually effecting an insect balance.

The larva started to come back as second generation and is still coming through it in the spruce, however, is far more serious, it is claimed. One of the main reasons for the valuable timber and the best source of new forest.

For Better Markets

Sir Edward Baskett Opposed To Over-Production Of Fruit

Opposition to agricultural over-production, belief better markets for fruit available for export, particularly Canadian wheat, and support of private competition in the efficiency of the fruit industry, Sir Edward Baskett, president of the Canada Pacific Railway.

Sir Edward spoke at a special convocation of the University of New Brunswick held in Fredericton at the annual convention of the Canadian Association of Technical Agriculture. He was lauded for his many degrees of doctor of laws, and his speech was met with opposition to "a belief that people must accept a permanent tendency to increase production of goods, and the state." Necessary private and public action through competition had a stimulus to efficiency, he declared.

"We are going through a phase of economic stagnation, and it would have occurred had there been no change by private and public action," the railway head declared.

Mayor Of Boston Slashes Taxes They Do Better Work

Newton is one of the beautiful suburbs of Boston with a population of some 60,000. The following appeared recently in a Boston daily paper:

Newton is going to stop some of its municipal expenses and cut out the horses and buy horses. Mayor Childs said:

"Now winter, he announced 20 more horses will be hired and more plows and doing better work than the eight tractor-plows owned by the city."

Can Prevent Criminals

Should Start With Crime Training

Some famous theories of crime.

A man who is not recognized in a few minutes the type of person who is likely to commit crime, whether it be murder, robbery or suicide, and who claims he can cure crime, is likely to be a criminal himself, as has arrived in London, England, to give a series of lectures on crime.

"I know I am not a criminal," said "and, if I, an individual, can cure them, why should not the world organize and cure all criminals?" From the beginning of mankind the world has never attempted to cure crime, but has only punished crime.

"I believe that if we organized properly we could get the world of virtually all crime."

"It is easy to pick out the child who is going to develop into a criminal, or criminal, or a drunkard," he declared. "It is almost impossible to pick out the child who is going to develop into a criminal, or a drunkard, who shunts himself into it himself, and who develops imaginary friends and the power of making things true, and when he grows older the criminal is more pronounced."

Merely A Habit

Having Head To North Has No Influence On Them

Some people who say that they can only go north, their head is to the north, the idea being that this places them in line with the magnetic equator.

"The idea is that the magnetic equator is a line of force, and many people have a habit of walking in a straight line, and in the engine, they must have their heads pointing that way when they are in the engine."

All this means just that, according to Professor Donald A. Laidlaw, a physicist at the University of Toronto, who has been probing into the scientific basis of the magnetic equator. His opinion confirmed by the editor of the Journal of the American Association of Physicists.

"The practice appears to have had its origin in the days when electricity and magnetism were not as well understood as they are today. The general ignorance of the subject caused a host of mystical interpretations to be given to the 'mystical forces of electricity and magnetism.'"

THE COVENANT
Now that the foundation for the permanent of basic dividends has been established by the publication of a farmer's covenant, it would seem a fitting occasion for some statement regarding the attitude of The Delia Times towards Mr. Aberhart's proposals before and since the election.
This journal, along with many other social credit newspapers, has been repeatedly for adverse criticism of the Social Credit politician, and it has been repeatedly said, and should not be added to shoulder an additional burden. However, the programme in this case is not a new one, and the farmer has his choice.

SOCIAL CREDIT POT GOVERN
A short time ago Mr. Gault, M.L.A., announced the results of Alberta some surprises in relation to the immediate introduction of Social Credit principles, and it has to be admitted that the prediction has been borne out by the events of the past week.

It will doubtless come as a great surprise to many good Social Credit theorists that the principles of the new philosophy are not all "taken," but that some of the "good" has been quoted from any other basis
divided.

Amusement was aroused early last week by the speech of Mr. Frank Anderson, M.L.A. (the man from Burnham), when he declared that only 100 per cent Social Credit would create basic dividends and that from a coming different political views would be unable to do so.

This was explained later by the speaker, in reply to a question to the effect that persons holding political views in opposition to the government necessarily would hold different economic views, and as the registration form for basic dividends
was in the nature of a covenant,
such people would not be willing to sign the form.

But the argument is fair enough.
These holding opposite views
have always declared it is impossible to pay basic dividends, why should they bother about registering for significant covenant?

Any talking of covenants can form
tell the Prospective Bible Institute promising a veritable Ark of Covenant.
